He is frankt vp to fatting for his paines,
God pardon them that are the cauſe of it.
Ri. A vertuous and Chriſtian-like concluſion,
To pray for them that haue done ſcath to vs.
Glo. So doe I euer being well aduiſed,
For had I curſt, now I had curſt my ſelfe.
Caſ. Maddam his Maieſty doth call for you:
And for your noble grace, and you my Lord.
Qu. Catesby we come, Lords will you goe with vs?
Ri. Maddam, we will attend your grace. Exeunt Manet
Glo. I doe thee wrong, and firſt began to braule, Glo.
The ſecret miſchiefe that I ſet a broach,
I lay vnto the greuious charge of others:
Clarence, whom I indeed haue layd in darkneſſe:
I doe beweepe too many ſimple gulls:
Namely, to Haſtings, Darby, Buckingham,
And ſay it was the Queene, and her allies.
That ſtrires the King againſt the Duke my brother.
Now they beleeue me, and withall wiſh me
To be reuenged on Riuers, Vaughan, Gray,
But then ſigh, and with a peece of Scripture,
Tell them, that God bids vs to doe good for euill:
And thus I cloathe my naked villany
With old odde ends, ſtolen out of holy writ,
And ſeeme a Saint, when moſt I play the diuell.
But ſoft, here comes my executioners, Enter executio-
How now my hardy ſtout reſolued mates, ners.
Are yea not going to diſpatch this deed?
Exe. We are my Lord, and come to haue the warrant,
That we may be admitted where he is.
Glo. It was well thought vpon, I haue it here about me,
When you haue done, repaire to Crosby place,
But firs, be ſuddaine in the execution:
Withall, obdurate; doe not heare him pleade,
For Clarence is well ſpoken, and perhaps
May moue your hearts to pity if you marke him.
Exe. Tuſh, feare not my Lord, we will not ſtand to prate,
Talkers are no good doers be aſſured:
We come to vſe our hands, and not our tongues.

Glo.

Glo. Your eies drop milſtones, when fooles eies drop teares
I like you Lads, about your buſineſſe. Exeunt.

Enter Clarence Brokenbury.

Bro. Why lookes your Grace ſo heauily to day?
Cla. O I haue paſt a miſerable night,
So full of vgly ſights, of gaſtly dreames:
That as I am a Chriſtian faithfull man,
I would not ſpend another ſuch a night,
Though t'were to by a world of happy dayes,
So full of diſmall terrour was the time.
Bro. What was your dreame? I long to heare you tell it.
Cla. Me thought I was imbarkt for Burgundy,
And in my company my brother Gloceſter,
Who from my Cabbin tempted me to walke
Vpon the hatches, there he lookes towards England,
And cited vp a thouſand fearefull times,
During the warres of Yorke and Lankaſter,
That had befallen vs: as we paſt along,
Vpon the giddy footing of the Hatches,
Me thought that Gloceſter ſtumbled and in ſtumbling
Strooke me (that thought to ſtay him) ouer boord
Into the tumbling billowes of the maine:
Lord, Lord, me thought what paine it was to drowne,
What dreadfull noyſe of water in mine eares,
What a ſight of death within mine eyes;
Me thought I ſaw a thouſand fearefull wrackes,
Ten thouſand men that fiſhes gnawed vpon,
Wedges of Gold, great Anchors, heapes of Pearle,
Ineſtimable ſtones, vnualued Iewels.
Some lay in dead mens ſculs, and in thoſe holes
Where eyes did once inhabit, there were crept
As if it were in ſcorne of eyes, reflecting gems
Which wade the ſlimy bottome of the deepe,
And mokt the dead bones that lay ſcatred by.
Brok. Had you ſuch leaſure in the time of death,
To gaze vpon the ſecrets of the deepe?
Cla. Me thought I had: for ſtill the enuious flood
Kept in my ſoule, and would not let it forth,
To keepe the empty, vaſt, and wandring ayre,

But
